leona

Staying true to her Southern roots, Alabama native Lauren Leonard relocated in 2007 from New York City—where she had been interning at Milly—to Atlanta to launch her now three-seasons-old clothing label. Mindful of the warm climate of her new home base, the 25-year-old designer turns out demurely skin-baring pieces in vibrant, breezy silks and cottons. "Here, spring starts in late February," she explains. "So heavy wools just don't work." Inspiration for the current season's pieces came from yet another balmy destination: Santorini. Leonard wanted the flowy maxi dresses, chiffon halters, and nautical-inspired, button-studded shorts and pants from this season's lineup to be the kind of pieces you'd wear yachting around the Greek isles. Prices range from $154 to $400. For more information, go to leonacollection.com.
